

Cinderella Summary

Far away in cottage in a small kingdom, the beautiful young girl, Cinderella spends long days as a servant in her own home – bowing to every whim of her cold stepmother and cruel, jealous stepsisters, Anastasia and Drizella. One day, the town criers invite all the young ladies of the kingdom to attend the Royal Ball where they can meet the dashing Prince Charming. Cinderella humbly inquires about the ball, but her stepsisters laugh at her mockingly. Her conniving Stepmother agrees to let her go – if she finishes an impossibly long list of chores.

To make Cinderella feel better, Cinderella's mice friends - including Perla, Jaq, Luke, and Gus scurry to stitch together a lavish ball gown from scrap fabrics and accessories the Stepsisters have cast off. The mice surprise Cinderella with the dress, only to have Anastasia and Drizella tear it to shreds in a fit of jealousy. Stepmother and the Stepsisters leave for the ball, leaving Cinderella behind in a pool of tears,

Magically, a Fairy Godmother appears, ready to perform a few miracles and get Cinderella to the ball. Using a magic spell, the Fairy Godmother transforms household items and Cinderella's furry friends into an elegant entourage. The Fairy Godmother reminds Cinderella that the spell only lasts until midnight, at which point everything will be as it was before. She then waves goodbye, and sends the enchanted coach on its way to the palace.

At the Royal Ball, Prince Charming is unenthusiastic about the ladies the King presents to him until Cinderella enters and lights up the room. The pair dance until midnight, when Cinderella rushes out before the spell breaks, leaving behind a single glass slipper.

Left with only the slipper as a guide, the King orders the Grand Duke to scour the kingdom until he can find the foot that will fit it perfectly. After a long search, the Duke finds a perfect fit on Cinderella's foot, and she is invited back to the castle to marry the Prince, and be the new Princess. The kingdom rejoices at the marriage of Cinderella and Prince Charming and, of course, everyone lives happily ever after.
